Python Basics

Python is a beginner-friendly programming language used for automation, web development, data analysis, and artificial intelligence. Its readable syntax helps developers express ideas with fewer lines of code.

A variable stores a value, such as a name, number, or list. Python uses data types including strings, integers, floats, booleans, lists, dictionaries, and tuples. Functions group reusable instructions under a name.